

ISRAEL INDEPENDENCE DAY

HON. ROBERT MENENDEZ

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 27, 2004

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Speaker, today, I am proud to join my colleagues in the United States Congress and world leaders in celebrating the creation of the State of Israel on this 56th anniversary of Israel's Independence Day. On this historic day, we honor the achievements of the Jewish people and the Jewish state, and salute a young and proud nation that has accomplished so much in so little time.

In the 56 years since independence, Israel has welcomed immigrants from all corners of the world as her population grew from 806,000 to 6,780,000 people, including over a million new immigrants from the former Soviet Union. Israel today is a vibrant democracy, the only democracy in the Middle East, and a world leader in technology and agricultural innovation for arid regions.

We must remember that these great achievements have come at a great cost. More than 20,000 Israel Defense Force members have died fighting for the cause of a Jewish state in the years since the war of independence—over 185 Israeli soldiers in the past year alone, since the last Remembrance and Independence Days.

And we must also honor and remember those innocent civilians who have been killed by terrorists trying to destroy the State of Israel and her people. In the last year, at least 176 people were murdered and 906 wounded in terrorist attacks.

On this Day of Independence, the United States of America and Israel stand side-by-side in our commitment to democracy, to peace, and to the State of Israel. The United States will never flinch and will never waiver in its support for the safety and security of the State of Israel and of her people.

A SPECIAL TRIBUTE TO LIEUTENANT COLONEL RICHARD W. LAUGHLIN ON THE OCCASION OF HIS RETIREMENT

HON. PAUL E. GILLMOR

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 27, 2004

Mr. GILLMOR. Mr. Speaker, it is my distinct privilege to stand before my colleagues in the House to pay tribute to a special person in Ohio's Fifth Congressional District. This year, Lieutenant Colonel Richard W. Laughlin, Professor of Military Science and Leadership at Bowling Green State University, will retire after 20 years of distinguished service in the United States Army.

Mr. Speaker, Lieutenant Colonel Laughlin graduated from the United States Military Academy at West Point in May of 1984. His hard work and dedication at West Point, the Army's pinnacle of leadership, was exceptional. Upon graduation, he branch selected artillery.

LTC Laughlin graduated from the Field Artillery Officers Basic Course in 1985, and his competence and professionalism in that field served the Nation well as he advanced in rank. Over a period of 8 years, serving at Fort Sill, Oklahoma and at Fort Richardson, Alaska, LTC Laughlin was promoted to first lieutenant and then to captain while serving as Fire Direction Officer, Battery Executive Office, S2, Headquarters Battery Commander, and as assistant S3.

Assigned to the University of Pittsburgh as an assistant professor for military science in 1993, LTC Laughlin was awarded the Governor's Cup for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania as the best ROTC battalion in the state in 1994. While serving as Chief of Operations for the 1st Cavalry Division at Fort Hood, Texas, he was promoted to the rank of major. He then transferred to Fort Hood, Texas to serve as Rear Detachment Commander, 82nd Field Artillery. Under his able leadership, the 82nd trained and deployed thousands of combat-ready soldiers to the Bosnian conflict in 1999.

LTC Laughlin began his current assignment as a Professor of Military Science at BGSU in 2000. Under his guidance, the ROTC program has been forged into a respected hallmark of the University, with program members participating in numerous campus events. LTC Laughlin's 20-year commitment of distinguished service to his country leaves as its legacy a stronger Army of able combat-ready forces, and a generation of students inspired by his dedication and courage.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in paying special tribute to the steadfast patriotism and unwavering spirit of Lieutenant Colonel Richard C. Laughlin. I am confident that his example will serve as an inspiration to a new generation of soldiers who, like him, will be brave and vigilant guardians for the United States and its citizens. May he now enjoy the freedoms and liberties that he has so ably helped to protect over his distinguished career.

ARMENIAN GENOCIDE

HON. MICHAEL M. HONDA

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 27, 2004

Mr. HONDA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to ask the Members of the House to join us in recognizing past instances of genocide and reaffirming our Nation's commitment to never again allow the perpetration of such atrocities anywhere on this earth. House Resolution 193 appropriately reaffirms America's obligation to international genocide conventions, and underscores the importance of recognizing past crimes against humanity, including the Holocaust and the Armenian, Cambodian, and Rwandan genocides.

We all know that silence in the face of genocide only encourages those who would commit such atrocities in the future. Israel Charney, the noted genocide and Holocaust scholar, has written extensively about the psychology of genocide denial. He has explained to the world what we should all know from history: to deny genocide is to celebrate the mass murder and to endorse the doctrine of corrupt power that brought about the destruction in the first place. To erase agonizing memories of genocide only mocks the sensibilities of the victims and their descendents—in essence, once again, victimize the victims.

For this reason, America must recognize the Turkish massacre and displacement of Armenians as an act of genocide. The House Judiciary Committee, upon its unanimous approval of the Genocide Resolution, described the Armenian Genocide in the following terms:

Beginning in 1915, the Islamic Turkish state of the Ottoman Empire sought to end the collective existence of the Christian Armenian population. From 1915 through 1918, during World War I, the Ottoman Empire subjected the Armenian people to deportation, expropriation, abduction, torture, massacre, and starvation. The atrocities were renewed between 1920 and 1923. It is estimated that one and a half million Armenians were killed out of over two million Armenians who had lived in the Ottoman Empire. It should be noted that these activities ceased with the institution of the new Republic of Turkey in October, 1923.

U.S. recognition of the Armenian genocide is long past due. By failing to admit and recognize atrocities that clearly took place we undermine our Nation's credibility and commitment to combat genocide. On April 24, President Bush issued his annual message in remembrance of the victims of the Armenian Genocide—only he failed to use the word "genocide." In failing to refer to the Armenian Genocide accurately, he has turned his back on his own campaign pledge and on 190 Members of Congress who want the Armenian Genocide recognized.

It is not enough to say "never again." We must take concrete steps to give it meaning and to bolster our own resolve. Passing House Resolution 193 is a small but important step in this ongoing effort to thwart those who would commit genocide. It is the least we can do for the millions who have been killed in Turkey, Germany, Rwanda, and Cambodia. Understanding the lessons of these tragedies will help prevent future crimes against humanity.

Mr. Speaker, I appreciate this opportunity to honor the victims of genocide, and to urge my colleagues to always remain cognizant of the pledge our Nation has made to prevent future acts of genocide.

INTRODUCTION OF THE FEDERAL DISASTER CONSUMER PROTECTION ACT

HON. MADELEINE Z. BORDALLO

OF GUAM

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 27, 2004

Ms. BORDALLO. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing legislation that would protect the credit histories of consumers residing in areas where damages caused by a disaster impede the efficient payment of debts. My bill would provide an important safeguard for individuals living in disaster-prone regions in order to ensure that their financial histories are not adversely affected by an inability to make prompt payments during and in the immediate aftermath of a Federally Declared Disaster Area.

I am concerned that public law does not provide a consistent legal means for consumers to rectify credit discrepancies occurring during a period in which their residence was included in a Federally Declared Disaster Area as defined by the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act. While I understand that many financial institutions do institute voluntary programs to give such customers reasonable flexibility in making payments, I also understand that these policies are not required nor are they uniform. Additionally, even where voluntary policies are instituted on the part of financial institutions, inevitably some mistakes will be made. The process of reconciling a credit report is often very difficult and time consuming, and disaster victims already face enough burdens during the recovery process.

The Federal Disaster Consumer Protection Act will assist victims of a disaster by allowing for a 7-day grace period beginning on the date on which the disaster area is declared. If the due date on a payment falls on 1 of those 7 days, an affected consumer would be able to request that any adverse credit report as a result of a late payment be removed from his or her credit history. To prevent abuse, the consumer would have to have made his or her account current within 30 days of the due date in order to exercise this protection. This legislation would also give the Secretary of the Treasury discretion to extend the grace period if he or she sees fit.

My bill proposes minimal standards that should not be a burden on those responsible financial institutions that already have a fair policy for dealing with consumers adversely impacted by a disaster. While I do believe that financial institutions should implement fair policies with regard to bank fees and other penalties for late payment during a disaster, my bill does not impose any new regulations with regard to these issues. The sole purpose of this legislation is to protect the consumer's credit. Support for this legislation will help reduce the risk of inaccurate credit reporting impeding the financial recovery of already vulnerable consumers residing in a Federally Declared Disaster Area.

ON THE 56TH ISRAELI INDEPENDENCE DAY

HON. DENISE L. MAJETTE

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 27, 2004

Ms. MAJETTE. Mr. Speaker, I rise on this Yom Ha'atzmaut, Israel's Independence Day celebration, to congratulate the people of Israel in their fifty-sixth year. I would like to recount a brief passage from Yitzchak Rabin, a warrior of peace, upon the occasion of his signing a Declaration of Principles for the Oslo Peace Accords in Washington, in what seems like a forever ago, in 1993. Prime Minister Rabin said then:

We have come from an anguished and grieving land. We have come from a people, a home, a family that has not known a single year, not a single month, in which mothers have not wept for their sons. We have come to try and put an end to the hostilities so that our children, and our children's children, will no longer experience the painful cost of war, violence and terror. We have come to secure their lives and to ease the sorrow and the painful memories of the past, to hope and pray for peace.

On the fifty-sixth birthday of the State of Israel, we are still praying for that peace. Day after day, hour after hour, we see mothers weep for their sons and daughters. But we no longer see those images as distant—because it has happened here, too, in the United States. We know now that terrorism incurs irreparable pain and loss. The State of Israel has known this loss since its modern beginnings in 1948.

Our loss in the United States connects us to Israel beyond the often symbolic, annual gesture of alliance—we are dear friends, and our friendship runs deep. It is rooted in the values and ideals we share—Israel, a vibrant and passionate democracy which includes respect for diversity and religious freedom for all faiths, mirrors the proud character of the United States.

And so, today, I wish the state of Israel and its citizens a peaceful birthday—last year I had the opportunity to visit Israel for the first time. Upon seeing the sunrise over the old city walls of Jerusalem, I was overwhelmed by the region's history. The leaders and citizens of Israel have yearned to achieve their vision of peace since the modern State of Israel was born. But this vision eludes us still. We cannot let this peaceful image go—we must continually strive to reach it.

Upon its establishment, the first official recognition of the State of Israel came from the United States of America. We have continuously demonstrated our support for Israel—and that support will be strengthened as we endure the pain of terrorism, and fight the battle for a lasting and secure peace, together.

ISRAEL INDEPENDENCE DAY

HON. HENRY A. WAXMAN

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 27, 2004

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in honor of Israel Independence Day, Yom Ha'atzmaut, to celebrate the strength of the U.S.-Israel relationship and pay tribute to the people of Israel whose vibrant democracy and brave military stand beside us on the front lines of the war against terrorism.

In the fifty-six years since the establishment of the State of Israel, the United States has worked with Israel to create a wide array of foundations and forums for bilateral cooperation on issues ranging from agriculture, science, energy, and the environment, to the development of technology for military and homeland security needs.

We have also worked hard to build a robust economic relationship. Despite the small size of Israel's population, Israel's GNP is now higher than that of most of its neighbors combined. This is a testament to the openness of the Israeli economy and its high volume of trade with the United States.

Perhaps most fundamental, however, is our work together to advance peace and security in the region. While Israeli peace agreements with Egypt and Jordan are enduring cornerstones of this effort, the refusal of the Palestinian leadership to embrace a peaceful and democratic future remains a painful challenge.

Each year, on the Israeli calendar, the celebration of Yom Ha'atzmaut comes on the heels of Yom Ha'zikaron, Israel's Memorial Day, when the nation expresses its eternal debt and gratitude to the soldiers who gave their lives for the achievement of the country's independence and its continued existence. Tragically, over the past three years of Palestinian terrorism, hundreds of Israeli civilians have joined those fallen heroes on front lines that now encompass the doorstep of its cafes, buses, and supermarkets.

Although the Palestinians have attempted to justify their hatred as a reaction to Israel's settlement policy or its acts of self defense, the true source of violence is the Palestinian leadership's desire to annihilate the Jewish State even if it sacrifices the dream of Palestinian statehood.

That is why even as the United States remains an honest broker in the effort to reach a final peace settlement, as a nation fighting the threat of terrorism ourselves we must continue to act in solidarity with Israel and on behalf of its right to exist as a secure, democratic, and Jewish state for generations to come.

PAYING TRIBUTE TO THE HISTORY OF THE GREAT SAND DUNES NATIONAL PARK AND PRESERVE

HON. SCOTT MCINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 27, 2004

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to highlight the grassroots effort to protect one of Colorado's greatest natural treasures: The Great Sand Dunes. I was privileged to play a part in this momentous and exciting process. My own effort to preserve this beautiful area began in 1989 on a family vacation to the Great Sand Dunes National Monument in Colorado's San Luis Valley, where I had a conversation with my friend Bob Zimmerman about his idea to re-designate the Great Sand Dunes National Monument as a National Park and Preserve. This conversation with Bob was the catalyst for a decade-long effort to put the Sand Dunes in their rightful place alongside the nation's other crown jewels as a National Park and Preserve.

A rare gem, Colorado's Great Sand Dunes cover an area of thirty-nine square miles and reach heights of 700 feet above the floor of the flat San Luis Valley, making them the tallest dune fields in the western hemisphere. The Dunes are nestled between rugged, snowcapped mountains that include 14,000-foot peaks peppered with pristine alpine tundra. The Great Sand Dunes of Colorado are a unique hydrological system that feeds one of Colorado's largest wetland areas and are home to beaver meadows and spacious grasslands that are dotted with beautiful mountain flowers. High mountain streams cascade first into pristine lakes situated above the timberline, flowing into dense spruce and fir forests, streaming farther to reach large Aspen groves, ponderosa forest, pinion-juniper woodlands, cottonwood and mountain willow riparian areas. As the newest member of America's National Park system, the Great Sand Dunes is one of the nation's most biologically diverse parks, encompassing wetland species such as sandhill cranes, the rare white-faced ibis, and Rocky Mountain species of bighorn sheep, marmots and ptarmigan. The park also represents a diverse cultural heritage, where Native American sites spanning thousands of
